Pink House Peace - track 6

This song was prompted by a heart-cry I saw carved graffiti-like into the blown wall of a war-destroyed home in Bosnia:

"Peace"

- an echo of the aching cry of millions...

The end of the song features a former "freedom fighter" whose dearest friends were killed at his side, whose life was driven by revenge and hatred.

But I saw this man's life utterly changed when he met the Prince of Peace... and experienced peace and the ultimate homecoming.

This thirst for peace and a homecoming is not just felt by the refugee in her isolated camp or the civil-war fighter in his sand-bagged fox hole. As I explain in the insert of the CD,

"A longing for a homecoming fills countless people's hearts: a yearning for peace..."

The world is full of those who dream of a homecoming. As He explains in Luke 15, it was to bring us "home" that Jesus came. My prayer is that the message of this ultimate homecoming would be clearly presented through this CD.
